The Voice of the South.

From the South Carolinian, the central organ of the South Carolina Democracy, the following is extracted:

THE DOCTHINE OF NON INTERVENTION .- THE REGENT DEBATE.—The doctrine of Congressional intervention in the affairs of the Territories, as mounted by some of our prominent southern have, is vaciously commented on by the press of se country The argument is: Southern men Territories with their property in slaves; they small, therefore, he protected while there by Congress, the executor of the constitution. The oc--oilers, on the other hand, contend that the locatories being the property of the States, Congress, as the legal representative of the States in their federal capacity, has the right to extende it. Here is a direct conflict which it become necessary to adjust. To do this, it was necessary to do that much abused act-compro-

In republics, as was illistrated in the formation of the federal compact, al in the construction of every State constituton, where there is conflict, reconciliation can mly be obtained by compromise. In such a sport was the doctrine of mon-intervention anto anced to the country; and atterbeing discussed in Congress, through the press, and on the hustings, in every State in the Union, it was accepted as the linal adjustment. It was then particularly acceptable to the South. Southern men saw that the North possessed the numerical control of Congress; the Wilmot proviso, proposing to ex-clude them entirely from the Territories, was being urged in alm st every Northern State. It was plan that the South had nothing to expect from Congress with this assumption prevailing to such an extent.

The assumption of authority to exclude sla very, which had been asserted and practiced under the Missouri Compronise, was met by the counter-doctrine of non intervention. By two powers could her institution be legislated against-ty Congress or by the people of the Territory. Congress, if the right to legislate was conceded trait, would, it was thought, exercise it inimical ly. This doctrine of non intervention tied its link, and left the people of the Territory still adde, as they were before, to act in reference to s avery. It conferred no more power upon the the late session of Congress. It was the policy of the Administration to limit the ampropriations m se, which disquisified Cong essional action. the point gained by the Souta was that of two the expenditures to the lowest point powers; that which was regarded as the more dangerous was disqualified. The South accepted dangerous was disqualified. it as the only practical solution consistent with her honor and her rights. We may dislike to acknowledge that the people of the Territory can control the question; but wherever there is trial by jury there will be popular power, whether we

From the tone of their journals, we could not po-sildy suppose that they are aware that it is only a little while ago that four or five of their members of Congress were expelled for corrupt practices, and that never, since the organization of the government, has a House of Representatives been guilty of prolligacy so open and shameless as that of the Congress which closed on the 4th of March, 1857, in which the Black Republicans on trolled tie organization. We could not possibly suppose that they have the slightest recollection of Mat te-on and his associates, notwithstanding that Matteson is still a bright and shiring light in the Black Republican party, a right bower of Mr Seward, and likely, if Mr. Seward should be President, to occupy a high place in the govern ment. In the midst of all the difficulties which have surrounded the Administration of Mr. Buchanan, it is most grat fying to observe the entire success which has attended his measures. No one subject had engrossed a larger share of the public attention, excited deeper feeling, created greater alarm, or more fully convulsed the whole country threatening its peace, if not the stability of the government—than the difficulties in Kansas. But the firm course of the President in vindicating supremacy of the laws-exerting to that end all the powers of his great office, heedless of partisan ciamor, and intent only on the performance of his constitutional duty, in full view of the most appalling consequences—brought order out of con-lusion, and gave peace and repose to that dis-tracted Territory. He appealed to reason, sus-taining his appeal by sdequate military force, to maintain the dominion of law for the public good, writing also from Lebanon, says:
und his policy was successful.

Mr. Magoffin took the ground that Congress.

When the President came into office, he found the people of Utah in open rebellion. They had resorted to acts of resistance, of violence, and roation, until there was left in the Territory starce a vestige of legal authority. The President again, with inflexible purpose, determined at all linzards to restore the supremacy of the laws. Promptly, at an immense distance, in spite of infinite difficulty and ambarras-ment, he precipitated sition of Mr. Magoffin, demonraces at as a strong military force into the snows of that in hospitable region, and at the same time extended to the deluded and exasperated people the olive branch of peace. The reign of law and order was mediately restored in this case, as in that of Kansas, without spilling a drop of human blood. The firm and decisive, but just and conciliatory, ares of the President, in both cases, signally

The President, at the commencement of his Administration, found the old vexed question of the right of search, which had been persistently maintained by Great Britain, disturbing, or threatening to disturb, the relations between the two Governments. Invoking to his old a principle or versing the high seas under its own flag, accomto them the same protection which is given to the soil, he presented the American claim to the when the practice of the assumed right began to be openly revived in the neighborhood of Cuba. omptly dispatched into those waters a strong naval force of twelve armed vessels, with per emptory orders to prevent its exerciseleading to inevitable collision nu e s the difficulty tained by our Government, was admitted by Great Britain, the preterded right of search was relinshed, the navy of the United States was put in the position of detending As errors ships as it detends. Another case of difficulty with a foreign power existed, involving an insult to our flag, contumely to our government, and injury to our citizens. The The United States ship Water Witch had in fired into from the fatress of Itaneric, the lite of an American offizen had been sacrificed, a treaty already agreed to had been abruptly re jected, and a mission of peace rudely repelled. The President appealed to Congress, and blamed thority to use force to scence an adjustment of liculties with the Government of Paraguly. He immediately dispotched a Commissioner, sup-ported by a powerful fleet, com rising uineteer Paraguay could resist, to demand just and non-orable terms. The expedition is now on its return home, after the most satisfactory accomplishment of its object—all difficulties settled, redress obtained, a treaty negotiated, and the great interior of South America opened to our commerce.

On the 1th of March, 1857, China was in the midst of her troubles. Intelligence had just been received that the Birrier forts, four in number, mounting one landred and seventy-six gaus, the strongest defences of the empire, had fired in to one of the boats attached to our squadron, poss Mississippi, and the Germantown, and to send a ponse the cause of another man.

These are some of the results of Mr. Buchanan's Administration. Should the same brilliant success follow him to the period which he has fixed for his retirement, it will be sufficient to gratify the highest aspirations of an American President.
